In EcoMind, Frances Moore Lappé—a giant of the environmental movement—confronts accepted wisdom of environmentalism. Drawing on the latest research from anthropology to neuroscience and her own field experience, she argues that the biggest challenge to human survival isn't our fossil fuel dependency, melting glaciers, or other calamities.

EcoMind: Changing the Way We Think, to Create the World We ...

EcoMind counters that notion that we are powerless with a host of stirring and reasonable alternatives, beginning with a list of human traits that we can count on: cooperation, empathy, fairness, efficacy, meaning, and imagination and creativity. Negativity is not, as some believe, a sign of sophistication; hope is not naive and foolish.

It's time to change the way the media reports on protests. Here are some ideas. "People kept sharing these videos that were coming up and it was unambiguous what was going on. We weren't looking at a stream of videos of violence erupting or clashes breaking out. We were looking at cops, attacking people."

Change is happening now. Embrace it. The coronavirus pandemic is forcing organizations to take a good hard look at the way they do things and how we look at a typical workday. With organizations expected to take a phased approach to in-office staffing, working outside of normal office hours is becoming more common.
